

New York Crystal Palace.

We have from the New York Times that the U. S. Department of the Crystal Palace is being actively attended to. Let us first glance at Europe and Asia, commencing with the list of contributions of a most interesting nature being put in readiness by various nations for the exhibition. The States of Terray has expressed his intention of dedicating his own nation to the purpose of conveying his contributions to the country. He has sent a Frenchman, ordering all the necessary paraphernalia to prepare an exhibition of arms, which his promises shall be made free of expense. The States of Terray, whose splendid statue has attracted such notice in the Crystal Palace, has determined on sending a number of works and several other emblems to be exhibited, and he has been so successful in his efforts, that he has been able to secure some very fine old and modern statues, and a number of the most famous paintings of the world. The States of Terray has also been successful in securing a number of the most famous paintings of the world. The States of Terray has also been successful in securing a number of the most famous paintings of the world.

Greenland; thence across Davis Straits to Labrador and Quebec. The entire length of the line will be 2500 miles; and the sub-marine portions of it from 1400 to 1000. From the Shetland Islands it is proposed to carry a branch to Bergen, in Norway, connecting it there with a line to Christina, Stockholm, Gottenburg and Copenhagen from Stockholm, a line may easily cross the Gulf of Bothnia to St. Petersburg. The whole expense of this great international work is estimated considerably below $500,000.

LADY vs. WIFE.—The editor of the Providence Journal, who is considering an arbitrator elegantiarum, which means a man of taste, says this:

"We wish the democratic papers would call Mrs. Pierce the wife of the President, instead of his lady. They are legally married, and she is entitled to the name of wife. Besides it shows all our ideas of morality to hear it implied that the President of the United States is travelling abroad with any woman other than his wife. If any of the democratic papers labor under the impression that the title of wife is not grand enough, we can assure them that Black and White Magazine, which is high-society in its nature, has fully endorsed it in a long and excellent article, the title of which was this:—What a distinction in the name!"

CONTESTED GOVERNMENT.

NEW YORK, JANUARY 1, 1853.

Change of Administration.

The Board Office at Livingston, Yates District, had been changed in Taylor County, and Jonathan N. McBride, Jr. appointed Post Master.

The Christian Chamber of Commerce unanimously passed a resolution to visit Capt. Ericsson to that city, with the Propeller bearing his name.

The Canadian Editor.

There were several who have enjoyed the opportunity of observing this fine scenery upon the Canadian, and well appreciate the very many beauties of poetry, with which a valued correspondent has favored us.

"We hope to have to return our columns frequently with the productions of the few favored ones, as we know they must always prove a welcome treat to the poetry-loving portion of our readers."

Locals.

It will be seen by references to their card, that Messrs. Copest & Youngs, of Columbia, have declined partnership, and that their already established and is hereafter to be conducted under the entire control of Mr. Youngs.

To those of our friends visiting Columbia, and in want of the whereabouts to be ascertained, we can knowingly recommend a glance at Mr. Copest's recent card, and, if need be, a visit of his fine taste and skilled handiwork.

The Pacific Mail Road.

Mr. Hays, from the Select Committee appointed to consider the subject of a rail road to the Pacific, made his report to the Senate, last day. The bill now reported and approved by the Senate generally provides for the survey and location of the road, and empowers the President to make the necessary contracts for the execution of the work. Twenty millions of dollars and six alternate sections of land of the public lands are appropriated. The bill will, in all probability, pass the Senate, but cannot possibly be reached by the House, and will have to lie over until next session.

Congressional Election.

In another column will be found the notice relative to the coming Congressional election, and the Act directs that the election be conducted in the same manner as elections for Members of the State Legislature, the polls will be opened by the Managers in this District, two days at the Court House and on Tuesday only at the country boxes.

The Home Journal.

We had the following rich compliment busied, engaged in going the rounds of newspaperdom, as we are special admirers of its value. "We are, we cannot refrain from giving to you," "shortly along," as it passes by, the distinction is taken from the Boston Transcript.

"We were much amused on getting into an omnibus, on the two times, by hearing the faint murmurs of an anxious mother, who was evidently seeking for a journey into the country. 'Tell her the baby, and don't forget about the Home Journal!' she cried out, turning to the woman who drove away from her. And we have faith in that lady's domestic character, and feel sure that her friends is a happy one. 'The Home Journal!' and the happy one," occupied her last thoughts. (The last, by, of course,) before the question of the wife's inferior mind, led her to a few pleasant recollections on Marriage, as Willie's excellent Four at home, or, if you please, the soul of the next best reminder of her happy home. The next might be sent by the post, but the baby couldn't. To give up both, she would be quite impossible. Her husband, by the way, was not mentioned in her farewell interview, but he, to doubt, was sending his loving life in the constant would give to his favorite paper, through his nurse, or her nurse, a long life in the Home Journal, and the baby," affectionately mentioned as above. "The Home Journal will take care to have a copy of Marriage and Willie's paper sent by wife's table Saturday morning. We can't send her the book, unless by express, and after after the reading of a Good and finally open."

Important Despatches.

The New York Courier, of Wednesday, carries by a special telegraphic despatch from a Washington correspondent, that the same day a highly important despatches from Mr. Fremont to the effect that negotiations are advanced towards the framing of a treaty by which all matters of disagreement between the United States will be settled as matters as possible definitely.

"Have we a Bourbon here yet?" The February number of Putnam's Monthly has come to hand, and exhibits a decided improvement both in appearance and reading matter, presenting as it does several original articles of unusual interest. The leader is the first of a series of sketches descriptive of the city of New York, illustrated with finely executed engravings, and well calculated to give to the reader a clear and correct impression of the principal localities.

But the paper, which especially caught our eye, bears the title with which we have headed our article. It unfolds the history of the Rev. Eleazer Williams, a venerable Missionary of the Protestant Episcopal Church, who has for many years resided among the Indians of Wisconsin; and attempts to prove him to be the dauphin of France, the son of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, who was said to have died during the French Revolution, shortly after the fall of Robespierre.

The case certainly presents many singular features, and imposes on him to be one of the most remarkable impostors of any age, or in truth, the longest lived impostor to the throne of the Bourbons; whether the latter be proved or not, the matter will engender one terrible inquiry and discussion, and must also be, if nothing else, one of the most curious romances in history.

Some of our readers will recollect that we published a few weeks since, an account of the singular impostures practised by several individuals, each claiming to be the dauphin and boldly asserting his right to the throne of France. The success which attended these efforts to personate the Prince, shows conclusively, that the imposture was generally prevalent in France, that he did not die as represented, but was still alive and in retirement. Besides, it is well known that many Frenchmen of high family, likely to know such a secret, have repeatedly declared that the dauphin was alive and resided in the State of New York. And a Mr. Belangeur of Louisiana, a few years ago, declared on his death bed, that the son of Louis XVI. was brought by him to America and placed among the Indians in the northern portion of New York—the exact locality where Mr. Williams is known to have passed his boyhood.

Mr. Williams popularly passes for a half-breed, and his reputed mother, an Indian woman belonging to the Iroquois tribe, is still living; but under the influence, it is thought, of the Catholic priest of the parish, refuses to make any disclosures on the subject. He bears no resemblance whatever to his nominal family, or to the Indian race, but on the contrary has all the characteristics of a Bourbon, and is said to exhibit a remarkably striking likeness to the late King, Louis XVIII. The dauphin, at the time of his alleged death, was represented to have been afflicted with scrofula, which, together with idiocy, was induced by the harsh treatment he received and the filthy mode of life he led, whilst under the control and keeping of his jailor, Simon the cobbler. Mr. Williams has upon his knee a scar left by this disease, in the exact place where it would have been on the dauphin's person, had he survived; and says, furthermore, that he recollects nothing which occurred in the early part of his life, but was a complete idiot until the age of 14 years, at which time an accidental shock caused him to recover his reason.

Many other circumstances still more remarkable are mentioned, but they depend entirely upon Mr. Wm.'s assertion and need confirmation. Among them is the assertion that the Prince de Joinville, on his visit to the United States in 1841, sought him out, gave him the first intimation he had received of his royal origin, and offered to restore to him the confiscated property of his father, Louis XVI., on condition of his relinquishing all claim to the French throne, which, however, Mr. Williams, on the spot of the moment, refused to do.

If our space permitted, we would like to detail all the proofs, adduced to establish Mr. Williams' identity with the Bourbon Prince; but for it is and must for a time continue to be a subject of interest to the lovers of the marvellous, as well as to the more serious and inquiring mind.

Although these facts are not conclusive, yet they create a very strong presumption in favor of the pretender, and require for their confutation, a strong array of positive testimony. The publication in Putnam's magazine has been made by Mr. Williams' consent, though not at his instigation or desire, as he manifests the greatest degree of indifference on the subject. Though he is fully convinced of his royal birth, he seeks to make no effort to regain his lost crown, and often expresses a wish that he had never known his title to be. He is still an humble minister of the Gospel, laboring faithfully in the discharge of his duties, and expresses his determination to spend the slight residue of his life in the services of his God, whose ways towards him must never remain unsearchable and past finding out.

The arrival of the Canada at Halifax, Feb. 4, brings advices from Liverpool &c to the 22nd January.

Correspondence of the Fairmount Standard.

CHARLESTON, Feb. 13, 1853.

Race week is past—gone glimmering through the dream of things that were—with all its hopes and fears—its anxieties and burnings, and all the concomitants of the crowded track, and the thrilling and exciting course, where Greek met Greek in a desperate struggle for the spoils. Yes, race week is gone—but its consequences for master and slave are yet told—the withered hopes and wasted force—the long faces and lank pockets, with sundry ceteras I may not mention, will tell a tale that has not been reported in the Newspapers. You need not envy our city the advantage which she enjoys, and the "material aid" she may realize from the annual influx, crowd and bustle of race week. 'Tis true, the tide of life flows in, and our streets are flooded by the living wave, but upon its surface it bears the scum and filth from a thousand stagnant ponds of corrupt and degraded humanity. A long list of accidents committed by blacklegs, swindlers and pickpockets, is certain to be the result of those annual gatherings, for a proof of which I need not particularize, but will only refer to the reports in the city papers for the last two weeks; during which time no prudent person considered it safe to walk the streets, even open day, with any considerable amount of money in his pocket.

Olé Bell and Strakosch gave their third and last concert in our city on Friday night, which was as much crowded as the first. They will realize about $4,000, which our citizens have cheerfully paid, being satisfied that they got the worth of their money; and I presume they would pay him as much more if he would stand and give them a chance. He leaves to-day for Augusta, where they are already on the eve, and will no doubt give the great New Englander a warm and hearty reception. He possesses a power over his instrument, perhaps unequalled since the days of Paganini. Under his magic touch, it breathes words of burning eloquence, which gives him the power of moving and melting his audience at pleasure; and this, I no doubt, the great secret of his success. He makes it utter words that all can feel and understand.

The weather, for the past week, has been beautiful, soft and balmy, almost beyond comparison, although perhaps a little too warm for the season; the thermometer is ranging from 60 deg. We have had no rain for several weeks and the streets are unusually dry and dusty. Such weather as this in mid-winter is very uncommon, even in this mild and temperate climate. The roses are blooming and the tender grass is every where springing up. But it is too pleasant to last, and we are expecting a violent change every day. Our city still remains healthy—only 10 white deaths last week.

The price of the markets are still alarmingly high, and the Hotel keepers have been driven to the necessity of raising the price of board in order to keep up their business. I am glad to find that it has not had the effect to keep away many visitors. More than two hundred arrivals have already been published this week, and a large portion of that number stopped at the Charleston, where the fare is $2.50 a day—pretty high accommodations, but it is necessary, and the public must submit to it. I see from the country prices current that butter, eggs, chickens, hams, and all the necessities, with some of the luxuries of life are selling at ordinary prices—about one-half, and sometimes one-third of what they are bringing here. And it is very astonishing that, with our increasing Rail Road facilities, our market cannot be supplied at reduced prices, from the middle and up country. Now is the time for farmers to make their fortunes. A gentleman residing near the city, realized last year, from a farm of few acres, which he planted in Irish potatoes, $2,000, clear of all expenses. That is better than making cotton 10 cents a pound, or corn at 40 cents a bushel.

Butter, in the middle and upper districts, is selling at 124 cents a pound, while we of this city are paying 374 cents for every pound of butter, and sometimes it is hard to get at that. Pork is 15 cents—beef 15, and veal 18—eggs 30, and every thing else in proportion. And now, in view of these facts, can any one blame the Hotels for raising the prices of board?—wonder is, how they have held out so long at the present prices. If the people of Charleston will send us some of their extra necessities of life, just the surplus of their own wants, we will give them as much as they may have the conscience to ask, and we will consider even that a great favor, for I know they would not have the face to ask our market prices.

The Cotton Markets.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.

The prices in this market conducted at our former quotations until Thursday, when they receded and have since continued somewhat depressed. But little activity has consequently been manifested. The arrival of the Canadian with advice somewhat favorable, tended to impart more firmness to prices, and we are to-day able to quote extremes at from 7 to 9.25.

COLUMBIA, Feb. 8.

The weather was very unfavorable for outdoor business, to-day, and consequently only a very limited amount of business was done in the cotton market. In prices, however, there was no change from those current at the close of last week. The miles of the week comprised 3,000 bales, at prices ranging from 7 to 84—Carolinian.

CHARLESTON, Feb. 7.

Sales to-day up to half past 1 o'clock 700 bales, at 8 to 10 cents.

At New York the market is firm, at full prices.
